Ronak is an incredible TF! Please take her tutorial if you get it. She makes the class fun and interesting and is very accessible and grades very fairly.

Take. This. Class. It is the best class I've taken at Harvard (yes, best), and I cannot recommend this enough. It's brilliant, helpful, fun, and just so so relevant. There is only one assignment per week except for some weeks where there are none, but they are all relatively easy, don't take too much time, and are 12/10 interesting. Coming from someone who hates both reading and writing, every reading and writing assignment in this class was enjoyable and didn't take long. Set aside 1 hour for class readings (30 minutes before each class) and 2–3 hours for assignments and that's all! Coding p-sets may be a little more challenging and take a bit more time if you have no experience in Stata or R, but literally everything is provided for you. I had no experience in Stata and all I did was follow the guides and did perfectly fine! For my final paper, when I did my first "by myself for myself" coding (with no help from guides or without any assignments telling me what to do), it was the most satisfying thing I'd ever experienced. Coding assignments and 2–3 of the later assignments that were long took a bit longer to finish, but they were still enjoyable as well. Plus, remember that there are office hours that you can go to if you're confused. Also, the instructor, Ronak Jain, is INCREDIBLE, so please reach out to her for literally anything. She WILL be helpful.

If there was an option beyond "Excellent," I would give Ronak that. She is the most incredible instructor I've had by a mile in my 2.5 years at Harvard. Not only does she radiate passion for economics, but she also spreads that passion to us. She has singlehandedly made me fall in love with economics and economic research, and I will give her credit for any achievement I have from here on out in economics because she really was, throughout this entire semester, that influential in my learning. You can tell just by sitting in one discussion without her that she is just so talented and knows exactly what she's talking about, but somehow still manages to make you feel like you are just as smart as her and are capable of so much. She has given me nothing but constructive criticism and motivation to do better, and I am truly so grateful to have had her this semester. She has inspired me in more ways than I could even begin to tell you. If she ever teaches another class, I will hands down be there.

Ronak was an amazing TF. She was able to explain everything so clearly and was very patient when teaching a certain topic that students had more questions on. She also facilitated great discussion in the section.

Ronak is the best! She encourages participation and makes everyone feel comfortable. She is very passionate and knowledgeable about the topic and provides good feedback on our assignments. She is also very accommodating and makes class fun.
